ARIZONIANS ARE TO HEAR MR. HUGHES TALK

Fifty Arizonians will hear Charles E. Hughes speak in the Shrine Auditorium at Los Angeles next Monday night, according to the information received by Andrew Bauman, secretary of the state central committee, yesterday. The California campaign committee, realizing that Mr. Hughes would not be able to make Arizona on his present trip, reserved fifty seats on the platform for Arizona people.

Mr. Hughes will speak before the Los Angeles audience in one of the largest auditoriums on the coast. The meeting will be held Monday night, August 21.

Commissioner Frank Woods, of Phoenix, who is now in Los Angeles, has been selected to give out the admission badges to Arizonians desiring to be among the fifty. He will be found at 2500 Maricopa avenue. Applications may also be made here to Andrew Bauman, at Room 225 Goodrich block telephone 1713. The secretary stated that the demand for the fifty tickets would greatly surpass the supply, but that the meeting is open, and the reservations of the platform seats is merely to make sure that Arizonians interested enough to apply for them, may have a good chance to hear the republican nominee speak.

STATE LIBRARIAN PRESENTED WITH VALUABLE BOOKS

State Librarian Con P. Cronin, who has just returned from a visit to relatives in New England, is the proud possessor of several books, said to be the rarest volumes ever brought into the state of Arizona. They were all printed several hundred years ago, and from an historical standpoint are invaluable. One of the books was written by the Rev. William Langley in London, England, and was printed in 1667. It is entitled "The Persecuted Minister," and deals with religion in all the deep and fearsome aspects of that age. It is copiously embellished with "firstly's," "secondly's," and on up the numbers for several years. The book was once the property of the venerable New England statesman, Joseph Butterworth, whose signature appears on the fly-leaf. Another of the books is a little younger. It is a bound volume of the London Magazine for the year 1765. It gives a very complete account of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the death of William Shakespeare. There is a great deal of space devoted to the Bard of Avon. Incidentally it might be mentioned that at that time there existed the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy. The writers of that age seemed to lean towards Sir Francis as the author of the immortal plays attributed to Shakespeare. One writer devoted a great deal of space to Shakespeare's shortcomings, claiming that he was devoid of vocabulary and unable to handle the English language as it should be.

Other interesting features are a number of maps of the world as it was known at that time. The territory of New Mexico of which Arizona is a part, appears in a very garbled shape. It is almost impossible to tell that the territory is the same as the Arizona today. The rivers can be picked out by their ancient names, but no towns appear on the map.

When Mr. Cronin opened up the volume of the London Magazine he found a copy of the Massachusetts Sentinel printed in 1732. The paper had evidently been in the book since that year, some ancient reader having placed it there as a bookmark and forgotten it.

The visit of President George Washington to Boston and Harvard university. This was his first visit to that city after the Revolutionary war.

A number of other old books have been presented to Mr. Cronin and are on the way to Arizona. They are all the personal property of the state librarian, but will remain at the capital indefinitely.

MANAGERS SPURN TERMS SUGGESTED BY THE PRESIDENT

had assembled and decide whether they would approve or reject his proposition. He was willing, he said, to withdraw and let them come to a decision. Mr. Garretson thanked the president, but explained that he believed it would be best for the men to go to their hall for a meeting. When they left, the men were in a bad mood. When about half of them had done so, W. S. Carter, head of the engineers, noticed Mr. Wilson winning occasionally as a husky employee gripped his hand tight.

"Just touch the president's hand, men," Mr. Carter said. "It is unaccustomed to your kind of grip." The president smiled his appreciation of Mr. Carter's thoughtfulness. After they left the White House, the men were to the conference for two hours at their hall, but decided to delay a formal decision until tomorrow's meeting.

Optimism marked every move of the brotherhood men during the day. They were pleased over the president's plan as outlined to them by their leaders in informal conference and appeared to like it even better after their meeting with the president and the two frank discussions of the situation among themselves. "It isn't dissatisfaction with the president's plan or dissension among the men that caused the vote to be postponed until tomorrow," one of the leaders explained tonight. "The committee just likes to talk about the proposal and we are giving everybody who desires to talk a chance."

Leaders declined to forecast the action of the men when they vote on the president's proposal tomorrow, but everywhere the feeling existed that they would approve it overwhelmingly.

enough time did not remain for printing them. It then was arranged for several men to check up on the members as they applied for admission. Special guards also were placed on all the fire escapes, windows and stairways and the doors closed before the meeting began. At the White House brotherhood men carefully identified every man in the meeting before the president spoke. The president's decision to invite the railroad president to the White House was reached after he had become convinced that the committee of managers here would not consent to the eight-hour day plan. The invitations were made to nineteen railroad presidents at first, but they were extended to all presidents "immediately accessible."

The railroad presidents will see the president at 11:30 tomorrow, and at that time he will explain to them in detail his plan and make practically the same speech which he delivered to the employees today.

When Mr. Wilson sees the railroad presidents tomorrow, the committee of managers who have been conferring with him all this week will be present. It was decided late tonight that the contention of both sides to his plan fully before the executives of the roads alone and word to that effect was sent to the men where the managers and their chiefs were in session.

Before proposing his plan, it was learned tonight that Mr. Wilson has sought vainly for two days to have both sides accept a definite means for enforcing the eight-hour day if it is accepted. This opposition came, however, from the more radical element of the general committee and was not regarded as endangering a vote of approval at tomorrow's meeting.

Such opposition to the president's plan as was expressed today among the brotherhood leaders was based, it is understood, on failure of the proposal to provide a definite means for enforcing the eight-hour day if it is accepted. This opposition came, however, from the more radical element of the general committee and was not regarded as endangering a vote of approval at tomorrow's meeting.

Indications when tonight's conference adjourned were that the railroad would issue soon a comprehensive statement setting forth their position.

Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, was designated as spokesman for the roads in tomorrow's White House conference. William Jennings Bryan, it developed today, had sought unsuccessfully to settle the strike by the application of his temporary truce peace plan, having telegraphed pleas to the heads of the contention of both sides to the controversy should be investigated thoroughly by a commission and a settlement attempted on the findings of the commissioners.

Swope Sends Resolution. SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—After a meeting here today of the Western Association of Short Line Railroads, D. M. Swope, president of the association, telegraphed to President Wilson sending him copies of resolutions passed by the railroad commissioners of California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon and New Mexico asking that the railroad brotherhoods and the railroads submit the questions at issue between them to the arbitration of the interstate commerce commission.

The president's attention also was called to similar resolutions passed by the chamber of commerce and the night California cities and of Portland, Ore.

GRIFFITH FINDS DISTILLATE O. K.

An interesting cross-country trip record has just been made by Dew Griffith, a well-known expert driver. Mr. Griffith made the trip to Los Angeles in a 1910 Cadillac, going over in twenty-one hours.

Coming back from Long Beach, with a register of 546 miles, Mr. Griffith made the trip in twenty-seven hours with one stop of the engine, which was while waiting one-half hour for the ferry at Parker. The round trip was made with distillate exclusively, which Mr. Griffith took pains to carefully test. It has been said that distillate overcoats the engine. To disprove this, Griffith claims that not only did he make the entire trip without the engine stopping more than one time, but that it included a lot of low gear work, at one place eight miles through new plowed road was made on low gear. This he believes completely vindicates distillate.

The record made with this distillate by Griffith is also of interest. The return trip was made with twenty-one gallons of distillate, which made an average of twenty-six miles to the gallon. Mr. Griffith arrived in Phoenix Wednesday evening.

HIRSCH BOUND OVER FOR DIAMOND THEFT

Homer E. Hirsch, irrigation project promoter, will promote nothing without the most few weeks, but a notice that cannot be promoted in jail, for that is where he is under a bond of $1500, having been held yesterday by Justice De Souza on the charge of embezzling three diamond rings, the property of Mrs. Sadie C. Bennett, of Morristown. The rings are valued at $1500.

Mrs. Bennett, whose husband is interested with many others in the irrigation project being promoted by Hirsch, gave Hirsch the rings last April to be deposited by him in a safety deposit vault at Prescott. It is only recently that she feared that they were not there. One of them was found at Friedman's, where it had been pawned for $250. Another had been pawned at Pink's for $200. Later Hirsch called there and offered to part with it to the ring for $200 more. A compromise was effected for $100. The location of the third ring has not been discovered.

The sheriff took possession of the ring at Friedman's, but the latter has repaid it and will come into possession of it today on filing a bond for $1500.

M. A. STANFORD RUNS FOR STATE SENATE

Yielding to the continued persuasive efforts of a large number of democrats M. A. Stanford yesterday consented to be a candidate for the democratic nomination for state senator from this county. His petitions in large number which had already been prepared, in anticipation that his consent would be obtained, were at once sent hurriedly to every part of the county for there is not much time left for the circulation of petitions. The friends of Mr. Stanford said that the petitions would be ready for filing within twenty-four hours.

Mr. Stanford has had legislative experience having served one term acceptably in the assembly of the territorial legislature. He is the father of Superior Judge R. C. Stanford. It seemed for a time that there would be only one candidate for the nomination on this side of the river, H. A. Davis, while Mesa alone has two, O. E. Stanley and Paul Baxter Beyer. The entrance of a fourth into the field somewhat complicates matters especially if a large number of democrats should take a notion to indulge in that form of indoor sport, known as single shooting.

BOARDMAN RETURNS FROM COAST SCHOOL

Robert Boardman, better known as "Bob," who makes his living by being physical director of the Y. M. C. A., has returned to Phoenix after a several weeks stay on the coast, where he taught in the Y. M. C. A. summer school, at San Francisco.

Boardman who is an expert in public relations and show card writing, was in full charge of that branch of the school. He obtained excellent results, and it was with sincere regret that the head of the institution let him leave to return to his duties in Phoenix.

While on the coast, Boardman visited the business men's military training camp at Monterey, where he was an interested witness at all sorts of maneuvers and military tactics. Since the day when he saw a bunch of staid business men busily digging in the trenches under the guidance of a hard-boiled sergeant of regular infantry, Bob has become an ardent fan of it. It is his opinion that if such part work is necessary in an army, it is best to abolish the recruit.

Boardman will resume his duties at the Y. M. C. A. before temporarily in charge of that institution during the selection of a secretary to take the place of Harry M. Blair, resigned.
